

Postgraduate Certificate and Master of Evaluation

The Postgraduate Certificate and Master of Evaluation, delivered by the Centre for Program Evaluation, are the only courses of their kind in Australasia. Each provides specialist skills with wide applications in industry, business, government, research, education and training.

Outcomes

This course is suitable for graduates from any discipline. It will enable you to:

- demonstrate advanced knowledge and understanding of evaluation theory and practice
- apply understandings of evaluation theory and methods to a range of professional settings
- demonstrate an appreciation of professional responsibilities and ethical principles that should characterise leaders in the evaluation field
- undertake high-level evaluation of policy and programs
- take a leading role in evaluation research and development, and project management.

Graduates can work as an evaluator in a wide range of fields, including (but not limited to) health, education, welfare, international aid and development, primary industries and private consultation.

Academic staff

The academics leading the Master of Evaluation offer a wealth of evaluation knowledge and experience. To discover more about these experts and their research areas visit:

Dr Trish O'Connor is studying the Master of Evaluation.

"I am doing the Master of Evaluation because I have a passion for the area, and I jumped at the chance to get a formal qualification in the field.

What I particularly love is that the course is applied, rather than purely theoretical. I wanted a toolkit I could use in work, and that's what I'm getting.

The lecturers are just fantastic. They have worked in the field for years and can provide practical examples, not just textbook theory.

I have moved to a new role as a Senior Consultant at a private firm, where I am involved with a wide range of project evaluations. This is my dream job, and I really think studying this course played a big part in helping me secure it."

Delivery modes

Students can choose to attend compulsory subjects on or off campus. While some elective subjects are also delivered on-campus (or with on-campus supplements) all elective subjects are offered online.
